On 19 April 1854 the 39th Foot embarked for Gibraltar and, on 6 June that year.

After the major set-piece battles of the Alma, Balaklava and Inkerman, the British, French and Turkish armies were now laying siege to the city of Sebastopol, the major Russian naval base on the Black Sea. Although 'the work in the trenches was heavy and most exhausting', the Third Division, to which the 39th Foot belonged, was held in reserve when the great assaults of 18 June and 8 September 1855 took place. When not taking their turn in the trenches, the Regiment was housed in huts, with the result that deaths from disease dropped off sharply. Just one officer and ten NCOs and men were killed in action and forty wounded during the campaign.

On 1 May 1856 the 39th Foot left the Crimea for Canada, where they spent the next three years, first at Montreal and then at Quebec.
